Spiraea Van Houttei is the best plant for an ornamental hedge that we know of. We have used it for this purpose, on the best places, for many years, and it has given the best satisfaction, forming a beautiful, compact screen, 3 to 4 feet high. When in bloom in June, it is a most beautiful sight, “a perfect snowbank of white bloom.” Each spray is a “perfect wreath.”
Rhubarb—Linnaeus, 1 year, grown since division .....	50	3 00
We have grown this variety about 40 years, with many others, from time to time, as they appeared, and consider this the best. All of our plants are grown from divisions of the roots. Rhubarb does not come true from seed.

Spirea Van Houttei has long been regarded as one of the finest of all ornamental shrubs, either planted singly or in clumps. It has in later years been used extensively for an ornamental hedge, as a boundary between suburban residences, as a screen between the lawn and vegetable garden, and in many situations where a partial or complete screen is desired. The plant is perfectly hardy, very easily transplanted, with a foliage of a lively green color, and when in bloom, in June, in this latitude, its wealth of white flowers, in great wreaths bending the branches, form a beautiful picture. Few plants equal it in charming outline, and none of equal hardiness surpass it in value. For an ornamental hedge, plants 2 to 3 feet high should be set 12 to 18 inches apart. They will soon fill up the spaces, forming a beautiful compact, green screen.
